INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In Switzerland, inflation stagnated in March, with a 0.3% year-on-year price increase, slightly below market expectations. There were no major changes, but a decrease in fuel prices was observed during the month. The central bank held its first rate-setting meeting of the year in March, during which, in line with expectations, they cut the base rate by 25 basis points, bringing it down to 0.25%. Inflation is likely to remain below expectations throughout the year, which could put pressure on the central bank to even lower the key rate into negative territory. According to the central bank's forecast, average inflation could be 0.4% in 2025, while for 2026 and 2027, it is expected to be 0.8%. Swiss GDP could grow between 1% and 1.5% in 2025. However, economic outlooks remain uncertain, with heightened trade and geopolitical tensions posing the main risks. In March, economic activity increased, with the KOF Swiss Economic Institute's economic barometer rising to 103.9 points from the previous month's 102.6. The manufacturing sector showed slight improvement, and demand-side indicators also increased over the month. In Switzerland, short-term bond yields fell in response to the interest rate cut but slightly corrected by the end of the month. As a result, the 1-year yield decreased by 1 basis point, while the 3-year yield ended the month unchanged.
