

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

The US equity market had an average performance in December, influenced by rising bond yields and mixed economic data. Although the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq index reached new all-time highs, led mainly by the technology sector, the year-end Santa Claus rally did not deliver the expected results. The ISM services sector index showed a solid growth picture, while labor market data indicated a balanced economy. The Fed's 25 basis point interest rate decision in December was in line with expectations, but Powell's speech suggested less rate cuts next year than expected. This caused a sell-off, that markets have not been able to recover from since. Some sectors, such as semiconductors, did not perform well for other reasons, partly explained by market overpricing and sector-specific uncertainties. In Europe, the German DAX index rose to a new high, supported by a favorable yield environment and expected interest rate cuts by the European Central Bank. But the German market also fell back by the end of December, caused by a political crisis like the one in France. The French market was held back by fiscal uncertainty and tensions around political conflicts, in particular a motion of no confidence in the government. Although weak PMI data indicated a slowdown in the Eurozone economy, investment stimulus statements and expected monetary easing improved sentiment in the cyclical sectors.

The Sub-Fund was filled up by 97% against the benchmark index at the end of December. December is generally positive for gold, but the extreme positioning of the previous months caused the gold price to move sideways in the last month of the year. Macroeconomic factors are still positive for the gold price. The strong dollar and rising US interest rates have not been able to break the rise of gold in 2024. This, in our view, could put gold on a positive outlook for 2025 and we still believe that in the event of a major market sell-off, it may be worth further increasing gold exposure in the Sub-Fund.
