

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

The result of the US presidential election was the main event that moved markets in November. Trump's victory can be explained, among other things, by the poor economic performance perceived by voters, who said that inflation and economic growth were the most important factors in their vote. This is interesting because the US economy is expanding at a steady 2.7% year-on-year rate, and inflation (2.6%) and unemployment are at low levels. Trump's election triggered a stock market rally on expectations of a looser regulatory environment and other business support measures. Bond yields reacted with a sharp rise on expected proposals by the President-elect to increase the public deficit, but this receded during the month. In general, markets have seen high volatility, driven by Trump's protectionist tariff policy plan and general policy uncertainties. The Fed's 25bp rate cut was in line with expectations, with analysts expecting a further rate cut by the end of the year. Economic growth in Europe remains relatively weak, but inflation is stabilizing at low levels. The US presidential election and Trump's draft tariff policy have had a negative impact on growth prospects in Europe, especially in the automotive sector. Tariffs towards China are also hampering the recovery of European industry, reflected for example in weak German manufacturing figures. The green transition is an ongoing issue, where the trade war with China is negatively affecting the supply of solar panels, a key element of net zero climate targets. In November, the BUX ended the month with a significant rise. Among the blue chips, i.e. the well-known and financially stable companies, MOL and Richter fell, while Magyar Telekom and OTP performed well. MOL's worse performance was due to the tax introduced in Slovakia. All four companies published their Q3 reports, which were positive overall. The other companies in the BUX index also published their quarterly reports, such as State Printing House, Waberers, Duna House and Autowallis, which mostly reported positive numbers. Magyar Telekom and OTP also received significant target price increases in November. Granit Bank announced its IPO in November. The Fund did not change its equity exposure during the month.
