

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In May, Hungarian inflation may have risen slightly again in line with market expectations, with the annual rate of price increases potentially accelerating from 4.2% to 4.4%. Although in May the government extended the price margin cap on food items and introduced margin regulation for some drugstore products as well, April may have marked the low point of this year's inflation data. From May onward, we may see a renewed upward trend in the pace of price increases. According to current information, these price margin regulations will remain in effect until the end of August, but most analysts believe that price margins will be in effect at least until next year's elections. At its May rate-setting meeting, the Monetary Council did not change the base rate, so it remains at 6.5%. Communication remained hawkish, with the Council stating that it is not yet time for further interest rate cuts. The Hungarian economy performed very weakly in the first quarter, with final data showing GDP growth of 0% year-over-year. Compared to the previous quarter, economic performance even declined. Although household consumption is still rising, its pace is slowing, and when expanded to include in-kind social transfers, it is already showing a decline—for the first time in two years. At the same time, analysts' growth expectations for this year are continuously decreasing, with most now projecting less than 1% growth for 2025. We kept our overweight position in Hungarian bonds, as we still expect some deterioration in global data, low oil prices should contain inflation risks, EU economy is slowing down, Hungarian growth is very disappointing, and local peak in Hungarian inflation may be behind us, meanwhile HUF remained strong recently, and valuation of Hungarian bonds is also attractive. Political agenda, general elections coming in 11 months time (fiscal concerns) are main risks.
