

VIG SocialTrend ESG Equity Investment Fund

B series HUF MONTHLY report - 2025 JULY (made on: 07/31/2025)

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The purpose of the investment fund is to create an equity fund that can profit from long-term demographic changes and the related changes in consumer habits. The Fund aims to achieve long-term capital growth by investing in global companies that can benefit from the growth and aging of the population, the social and economic changes associated with a healthy lifestyle, urbanisation, the expansion of the emerging markets' middle class and the global economic trends stemming from these social changes, as well as the changing consumption habits driven by such demographic changes.

The Fund aims to achieve its objectives through equity-type instruments, primarily exchange-traded funds (ETFs), equities and open-ended public investment funds. The Fund takes a forward-looking approach and actively seeks companies in industries that can benefit from the long-term global demographic changes and related changes in consumer habits. Investments are made in companies that have strong fundamentals and are well positioned for long-term value creation and competitive advantage due to demographic and social changes. Trends related to demographic and social changes are long-term processes that go beyond normal economic cycles and are generally global and affect the entire world. Consequently, the Fund is not subject to any geographical restrictions. Since the Fund aims to profit from long-term growth and has significant exposure to the equity market, we recommend the Fund to investors who want to invest in the longer term and have a relatively high willingness to take risk.

MARKET SUMMARY

The rise in artificial intelligence stocks continued in July, but defensive sectors still failed to show relative strength. Several factors supported the rise of the US stock market in July: the weakening of the dollar, algorithmic position building due to declining realized volatility, and the continued strong growth narrative in the technology sector, particularly for AI and semiconductor companies. However, stock market valuations have been approaching extreme levels in almost all markets in recent weeks (except for healthcare stocks). The economic slowdown – for example, weak consumer spending and labor market data, as well as low private sector growth estimates by ADP Research, the global leader in employment performance measurement – has not caused panic. The passage of the budget bill known as the "Big Beautiful Bill" represents a significant fiscal stimulus, which has supported the stock market in the short term but has raised concerns among bond market investors about the already controversial sustainability of the national debt in the longer term. However, the healthcare sector, which accounts for the vast majority of the Fund's investments, has not yet been able to recover from the decline following the tariff announcements. Healthcare stocks have faced political headwinds under President Donald Trump's administration. Not only are tariff announcements and threats keeping pressure on the sector, but in July, the US president sent a letter to 17 major pharmaceutical companies asking them to reduce the price of their drugs sold through the Medicaid program to the lowest international price level and to repatriate the profits resulting from the rise in foreign prices for the purpose of US price support. It would also require manufacturers to establish direct consumer sales channels where patients could purchase at insurance prices. These measures would all have a negative impact on the profitability of these companies. As a result of the decline, the healthcare sector is now considered particularly cheap compared to its historical average, where double-digit earnings growth is still expected. However, signs of stagflation (slowing growth + rising inflation) in the US economy may draw attention to these more defensive sectors.
