

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In October, US capital markets continued to ride the AI wave, while the Fed's expected final interest rate cut this year and the end of quantitative tightening pumped further liquidity into the system. In addition to the dominance of the technology sector, the minor trade truce reached at the Trump-Xi meeting—a reduction in tariffs from 57% to 47% and a one-year easing of rare earth exports—came as a positive surprise, strengthening the dollar and growth prospects. At the same time, the threat of a government shutdown, record data center investments, and Fed Chairman Jerome Powell's caution regarding the December cut dampened the performance of traditional sectors. Bond yields moderated only slightly at longer maturities, while the short end saw a noticeable repricing of the interest rate curve. Europe remained in the grip of political and economic uncertainty: the initial optimism surrounding the formation of the French government proved short-lived, with banking sector stocks falling particularly sharply. Inflation rose slightly in September, but the ECB's decision to keep its key interest rate unchanged raised hopes of easing. Positive signs include a surge in car sales (especially hybrids imported from China) and stable unemployment. On the other hand, weak German industrial production and high energy prices linked to sanctions against Russia continue to put pressure on the continent's economy.

The Sub-Fund achieved a positive return in October. Gold continued its upward trend that began in September, and in mid-October, the December futures contract reached $4,400. This level represented profit-taking for many investors, and the price of gold fell by more than 10% in a few days. Sudden large movements against the existing trend are not uncommon in the precious metals market. These are healthy movements, as the market sweeps out the "hot money." The fundamentals of gold have not changed, and the factors that led to this year's rise remain valid: the steadily growing US national debt, political uncertainty, and central bank purchases.
