

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In December, Hungarian inflation may have decreased close to the central bank's target according to market expectations, bringing the average inflation rate for 2025 to around 4.4%. At its December rate-setting meeting, the Monetary Council again left the policy rate unchanged, so the base rate remains at 6.5%. However, the central bank's communication has changed: Central Bank Governor Mihály Varga emphasized that, compared with the previous forecast, underlying inflationary processes are expected to develop more favorably over the course of the coming year. As a result, the Council will decide on the level of the base rate on a meeting-by-meeting basis. In the December Inflation Report, the central bank significantly revised its inflation forecast for next year. The expected average inflation rate for 2026 was lowered from 3.8% to 3.2%, while the GDP growth forecast was reduced from 2.8% to 2.4%. During the month, short-term yields declined. Following the prospect of a potential interest rate cut, the market has reversed the earlier rise in yields, bringing long-term yields back close to their local lows. We used this as an opportunity to take profits: we reduced exposure to longer-dated bonds and instead shifted the focus toward the middle of the yield curve. We expect a further steepening of the domestic yield curve and are adjusting the Fund's interest rate exposure accordingly.
