INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

The Fund aims to share in the returns of the Polish stock market, and to profit from Polish economic growth through stock prices and dividend income. In accordance with the risk characteristics of equity investments, the Fund qualifies as a high-risk investment. According to the Fund Manager's intentions, the bulk of the Fund's portfolio is made up of the shares of foreign companies issued through public offerings. The primary investment targets are the securities, traded on the stock exchange or about to be listed on the stock exchange, of companies that operate in Poland or that derive a significant portion of their revenues from Poland, or whose shares are listed on the Warsaw Stock Exchange. The Fund may also invest in equities of other Central and Eastern European companies (Austria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Russia, Romania and Turkey). When developing the portfolio, the shares determine the nature of the Fund, and thus the proportion of shares that can be held in the Fund at any given time may reach the prevailing legal maximum. The Fund holds more than 30% of its assets in currencies other than the local currency (HUF).

MARKET SUMMARY

In January, the U.S. markets were characterized by duality: while the AI-driven rally in the technology sector pushed indices to new highs, monetary policy and geopolitical risks called for caution. As expected, the Fed did not cut interest rates, and the market is anticipating one or two 25-basis-point cuts this year. The flattening of the yield curve reflects the disappearance of expectations for short-term interest rate cuts. Stock market sentiment is also bolstered by the relative strength of small-cap companies.

Donald Trump's aggressive foreign policy dominates the narrative of global markets. The possible acquisition and strategic armament of Greenland, as well as the tough stance against Mexico and Colombia, are causing uncertainty in international trade. Due to the surge in energy demand from data centers, some analysts are warning of the inflationary impact of rising electricity prices. The European economic outlook remains subdued. Although German PMI data was weak at the end of the year, the manufacturing index was better than expected in January. Eurozone inflation has reached or approached the 2% target, reducing the need for further monetary tightening and enabling the ECB to continue its cycle of interest rate cuts. However, most markets do not expect rapid movement but rather stability or very cautious easing in 2026.

Global and regional stock markets started the year with an upnote. Market sentiment in January was primarily shaped by the Federal Reserve's interest rate decision and the flash reports of large technology companies, which had an overall supportive effect on stock markets. Central European stock indices performed exceptionally well, further boosted by the weakening of the dollar. The Polish stock index lagged behind the Hungarian and Romanian markets in regional comparison, but its 4.51% performance in forint terms can still be considered favorable compared to the nearly 0% returns on international stock markets. Within the index, KGHM, one of Poland's largest mining and metals companies, achieved the highest returns, similar to the previous month, mainly due to further increases in gold, silver, and copper prices. The utility company PGE SA and the telecommunications company Orange Polska also achieved double-digit returns. Among the weaker performers, the retail sector was overrepresented: Dino Polska and Żabka saw their share prices decline, while e-commerce company Allegro also posted a significant decline.
