

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

April was overshadowed by the blockade of the Strait of Hormuz: the leading index of the New York Stock Exchange, the S&P 500, started the month at the yearly low, then rose to a record high on news of a US-Iran ceasefire, then faltered as peace talks stalled. The index finally closed up at the end of the month, but the rise remained concentrated: technology and AI held the market, while the energy sector lost its war premium. Although the VIX (volatility index) decreased, the sustainability of the bull market is questioned by the fact that the rally took place in a narrow range of stocks, while "breadth indicators" that compare the number of rising and falling stocks deteriorated. The Fed, which plays the role of the central bank, refrained from changing interest rates in April, but the market gradually revised its easing expectations during the month, as the oil price shock projects permanently higher inflation. Eurozone inflation rose to 2.5% in March, driven by the energy price shock. The European Central Bank kept its key interest rate unchanged in April, contrary to expectations, as policymakers are waiting for the war effects to fade before easing. EU core inflation stood at 2.4% at the end of March, but the gradual impact of the energy shock is expected to be reflected in Q2 data.

In April, European stock markets posted their strongest monthly performance in over a year, despite significant uncertainty caused by geopolitical tensions. The Stoxx Europe 600 index rose 4.8% in euro terms during the month, marking its largest monthly gain since January 2025 and its best April performance since the outbreak of the 2020 pandemic. The month was characterized by strong volatility. European stock prices fluctuated repeatedly between sharp rises and sudden declines, as news regarding the U.S.-Iran conflict continuously shaped expectations regarding energy prices, inflation, and economic growth. Most of the rise occurred at the beginning of the month, when hopes for a potential U.S.-Iran peace agreement strengthened. At its April meeting, the European Central Bank left the deposit rate unchanged at 2.0%, as uncertainty remains high due to the situation in the Middle East. ECB President Christine Lagarde indicated, however, that policymakers seriously discussed the possibility of a rate hike at the meeting, suggesting that tightening could still occur in June. In terms of sectors, IT, industrial, and financial companies led the market rally in April, while the energy sector corrected; however, looking at the entire year of 2026, the energy sector still leads the rally in Europe as well. Within the Fund, we continued to maintain our overweight positions in Spanish and Greek stocks, the financial sector, and mid-cap companies.
