

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In August 2026, European stocks continued to rise, though their performance lagged slightly behind that of their global counterparts. The Fund outperformed its benchmark index by +0.19% during the month.

In Europe, the corporate earnings season proved to be particularly strong: both banks and industrial companies related to MI infrastructure outperformed, and the indices rose to new highs. Growth forecasts for the eurozone were revised upward, and inflation stabilized near the target. At the same time, long-term European yields rose to historic highs due to the ripple effects of global fiscal concerns, while high gas prices pose a risk to growth.

European markets continued to enjoy positive momentum for the fifth consecutive month, supported by solid earnings, improving investor sentiment, and growing capital inflows from investors shifting away from U.S. stocks due to concerns over AI spending. The banking sector remained one of the market's main drivers: ongoing M&A activity—particularly UniCredit's acquisition bid for Commerzbank clearing a key regulatory hurdle—sustained the positive sentiment in the financial sector.

Among the companies with the largest weightings in the benchmark index, Argenx led the way thanks to strong momentum in the biotechnology sector, SAP rose due to strong demand for enterprise software, and Adyen gained ground thanks to improving payment volumes. Among the companies that had a negative impact, Société Générale weighed on the benchmark index due to sector rotation out of French banks; Ferrovial fell due to pressure on the infrastructure sector; and Kering continued to suffer from weak demand for luxury goods.

The Fund maintained a gross equity exposure of 105%, reflecting a moderately leveraged long position. Overweight positions in Intesa Sanpaolo, Banco Santander, UniCredit, and ING contributed positively to performance thanks to a strong banking sector backdrop, while the overweight position in ASML added value as the European technology sector held up well. Underweight positions in Hermes, LVMH, Kering, Danone, and L'Oréal also contributed positively to relative performance, as the luxury goods and consumer staples sectors underperformed the broader market during the month.
