

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

European markets closed slightly lower in September, underperforming their developed-market counterparts. The Fund, however, generated returns that exceeded those of the benchmark index. The divergence between European and global markets was primarily driven by the European Central Bank's decision on September 10 to raise its deposit rate by 25 basis points to 2.5%. This was the second rate hike since the outbreak of war in Iran in February, while soaring energy prices kept inflation well above the central bank's target. Several ECB members subsequently indicated that further tightening could not be ruled out, which put upward pressure on bond yields throughout the month and weighed on interest-rate-sensitive stocks. Among the Fund's top positive contributors, ASML's share price rose thanks to continued strong demand for semiconductor equipment, while ASM International was supported by a robust order backlog. On the negative side, Adyen fell significantly due to concerns about the payments sector, while Hermes and LVMH were weighed down by weakening demand for luxury goods resulting from higher interest rates and deteriorating consumer confidence. The luxury goods and consumer goods sectors were among the month's worst-performing segments, so underweighting them improved relative performance. Overweight positions in Intesa Sanpaolo, Banco Santander, UniCredit, and ING contributed positively to performance, as the banks benefited from the higher interest rate environment. The Fund maintained a gross equity exposure of 102%, representing a moderate 2 percentage point overweight relative to the 100% neutral level.
