VIG HUNGARIAN MONEY MARKET INVESTMENT FUND

A series HUF MONTHLY report - 2026 OCTOBER (made on: 10/31/2026)

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In October, no meaningful progress was made towards resolving the conflict between the United States and Iran, while tensions once again escalated in the Strait of Hormuz region. The US naval blockade and Iran's retaliatory measures continued to cause significant disruptions to oil shipments, pushing oil prices higher, with Brent crude rising to levels not seen since April. Nevertheless, the Hungarian yield curve shifted downward over the month. Yields declined by 6 basis points at the 1-year maturity, 35 basis points at the 5-year maturity and 25 basis points at the 10-year maturity. In addition to the more favourable fiscal outlook, the decline in yields was supported by stronger demand for government bonds from domestic banks. Credit institutions may step up their purchases to take advantage of the excess profit tax relief linked to increasing their government bond holdings. At its monetary policy meeting at the end of October, the National Bank of Hungary left its key policy rate unchanged at 5.5%, in line with expectations. The central bank reiterated that its decisions would remain data-dependent. Inflation may have edged up slightly further in October, with the annual rate of price growth expected to rise to 2% from 1.6% in September. Against the backdrop of rising energy prices, market expectations of interest rate cuts in Hungary have been fully priced out, with no further cuts anticipated in either 2026 or 2027 at the time of the writing.
