VIG SMART MONEY FUND OF FUNDS

A series HUF MONTHLY report - 2026 OCTOBER (made on: 10/31/2026)

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In October, three mutually reinforcing forces shaped the money and capital markets: doubts about the finance ability of the investment cycle linked to artificial intelligence, persistently high real yields, and oil prices above $110 due to the escalation in the Middle East. At its October meeting, the Federal Reserve kept its benchmark interest rates unchanged, even though an interest rate hike had been priced in just a month earlier. The 10-year yield fell from a peak of 5.3% to below 5%. This was not driven by disinflation, but rather by expectations of a slowdown in AI-related bond issuance. Although the S&P 500 hit a new high early in the month, this was followed by the longest losing streak for semiconductor stocks since 2008. The main risk remains the November 3 midterm elections and the subsequent likelihood of a U.S. military strike against Iran. In Europe, inflation has remained above 3%, shifting the balance within the European Central Bank toward further tightening. The French yield spread widened to more than 170 basis points, and the 10-year yield temporarily exceeded 5%. The auto and luxury sectors were dragged down by weak Chinese demand, while AI-related electric vehicle stocks were weighed down by global market sentiment.
In October, the Fund's net asset value declined slightly. October 2026 was characterized by sector rotation in developed stock markets, as well as a correction in the technology sector, while broader indices remained relatively stable (for example, the MSCI World and other developed-market indices representing global markets closed with only a moderate decline of around 0.5– 0.8%). Beneath the surface, however, significant shifts were taking place: concerns among investors about the return on investment in artificial intelligence (AI) intensified, putting major tech giants under significant pressure and leading to a more than 5% plunge in the Nasdaq Composite index. At the same time, there was a dramatic shift of capital from growth stocks toward value-oriented and more defensive sectors, so companies in the energy, utilities, and consumer staples sectors performed particularly well during the month. The absolute return funds in our portfolio lost some of their value, mainly due to the decline also seen in regional equities. At the same time, the forint weakened, which, however, was favorable for the forint-denominated performance of our smart-beta strategies with foreign currency exposure. We also launched three new smart-beta strategies during the month, which contributed positively to the performance of the smart-beta portion of the portfolio.
