MARKET SUMMARY

With the yield curve rising, the Polish bond market had a weak performance in August. Yields were up 71 basis points at three-year maturity, 83 basis points at five-year maturity and 76 basis points at ten-year maturity. The bond market weakened mainly due to a renewed rise in inflation and corrected the excessive fall in yields in previous month. Preliminary data showed that year-on-year inflation in August resumed its upward trend, rising to 16.1% from 15.6% in the previous month, thus finishing above market expectations. Inflation could be further fueled by rising energy prices, raising the likelihood of the Bank of Poland raising interest rates for the 11th consecutive time. The second quarter GDP figure came in worse than expected, with the Polish economy expanding by 5.5% year-on-year, but slowing by 2.1% from the previous quarter. Economic performance will therefore play a key role in any decision to raise interest rates. Given the rise in energy prices, there is no intention to end interest rate hikes completely, but the slowdown in the economy may also reduce the pace/rate of interest rate hikes in the future. The end of the rate hike cycle may be close, except for the case, in which European energy crises leads to a new significant sell-off in connection with regional assets. The Purchasing Managers' Index continued to fall, with the manufacturing index falling to 40.9 from 42.1 the previous month. This is the fourth consecutive month of decline in the index. Output and new orders fell as high inflation and an uncertain economic environment weighed on demand. Industrial production grew by 7.6% in July, below market expectations of 7.8%. As for public finances, the state generated a surplus of PLN 9 26.4 million in July, bringing the 12-month rolling budget deficit to 0.95% of GDP.
