

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In the US, the Federal Reserve did not raise its benchmark interest rate, which was in line with expectations but also left some question marks. The interest rate curve, now pricing in that the Fed will raise rates once more this year by 25 basis points, but then do nothing until the end of the year and start the rate-cutting cycle early next year. The question is why the Fed thinks it didn't have to raise rates now and will in 6 weeks. Analysts say that although the Fed communicates its intentions well, the thought process is inconsistent.

The Monetary Council of the Hungarian National Bank (MNB) acted as expected at its June rate decision meeting. The base rate remained at 13 percent, but the interest rate corridor narrowed slightly, with the overnight deposit rate remaining at 12.5 percent and the overnight lending rate falling to 18.5 percent. The base rate has been at 13 percent since September last year, and the MNB has not changed it since. However, in October last year, it introduced a one-day deposit tender at 18 percent, in response to the collapse of the forint. This rate was lowered by the Monetary Council at last month's rate-setting meeting, after it was seen that inflation had peaked and would now moderate. The May inflation figure was also positive at 21.5 percent, so the central bank was expected to cut the benchmark overnight deposit tender rate further. Inflation has begun to moderate noticeably and there is a good chance that the rate of inflation could fall to well below 10 percent by the end of the year. The forint remained stable against the euro, at 371 forints to 1 euro at the end of the month.

The fund ended the month of June with a positive return. Equity markets rose for the most part in local currency terms, with no major divergence. Exposures to HUF money markets closed in positive territory, in line with the environment, but funds holding longer-dated Hungarian government bonds also performed similarly well. In commodities, the picture was mixed, with oil prices sideways and precious metals trending down. In June, absolute return funds held by portfolios delivered positive returns and their performance since the beginning of the year has been strongly positive. Equities remain underweight relative to the long-term target weight, but this had little impact on relative performance during the month as absolute return and bond investments also performed well.
