

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

Global growth is running below-trend this year but considering the size and extent of recent headwinds (real rate shock, monetary tightening) is holding up relatively well. Underneath this resilient global picture there continues to be a marked divergence between strong services and weak manufacturing sectors. As a result, manufacturing-intensive economies like China and Germany are struggling while more services-based ones like the United States are outperforming. We still see a disinflationary environment. While goods inflation has fallen notably, services inflation is still running high across a wide range of economies.

In July, all Tempo funds provided positive returns for their investors. This was mainly due to the fact that the vast majority of the funds' investments performed well in both local currency and Hungarian forint. The prices of mostly US equities and European equities have risen, as have the prices of emerging market government bonds in foreign currencies in general. Among the exceptions, perhaps, were government securities of advanced economies, where a slight dip in prices was visible. The trend in commodity markets was also more upwards. Absolute return investments in portfolios also performed well during July.

During the month, we continued to reduce exposure to Hungarian government bonds in the funds and instead bought developed country government bonds. The reasons for this were twofold, one being that we no longer considered Hungarian government bonds to be as attractive and we wanted to give the funds greater currency exposure. We maintained our equity positions over the month, which meant that we kept equities in developed market companies close to our long-term target levels, while we continued to underweight emerging market equities.
