

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In the US, at a press conference after the US Federal Reserve's September meeting, the Fed chairman said that he believes US interest rates will remain higher for longer than market participants had previously thought, which could mean that despite the fall in inflation, based on the macroeconomic numbers, the Fed is not willing to cut rates quickly. Also, Fed Chairman Jerome Powell does not seem to want to declare victory over inflation too soon, after his ill-fated "inflation is only temporary" statement two years ago, which means that he is leaning towards tightening, especially while economic indicators are still strong. Powell has also talked about soft-landing, but contrary to market expectations, this is not the Fed's baseline scenario. Real wages in the US are rising again, which is boosting economic activity, and the combined effect of these could lift the inflation trajectory in the coming months.

In Hungary, the MNB has continued to cut interest rates and after a long period, the base rate and the policy rate are the same. The base rate is now only 13%, which raises the question of how the forint will react to this. Although 13% is the highest in the region, the political risk premium makes it uncertain that the forint can remain stable. The MNB expects domestic inflation and core inflation to continue to fall at a rapid pace in the coming months. As the pace of disinflation continues to accelerate, inflation is expected to ease into the single-digit range in the autumn.

In September, Tempo funds performed positively. The higher the risk profile of a Tempo fund, the better the monthly performance in September. There were still no changes to the composition of the funds during the month. This is because we wanted to maintain the positioning we have established so far, which means higher currency exposure than before and higher international bond exposure. The latter was because it seemed a much better entry point to return to international bond markets compared to previous levels. Equity positions were maintained over the month, which meant that we kept developed market equities close to long-term target levels, while emerging market equities remained underweight.
