

INVESTMENT POLICY OF THE FUND

MARKET SUMMARY

In January, markets were still trying to decide whether or not the economic scenario outlined by the Federal Reserve would materialize. Since last November, the Fed has been saying that the economy will be soft landing, despite a 5.25% interest rate and several macroeconomic data points pointing to a recession in the US economy. Investors who positive about the future are looking at how much AI will reform the US economy and what fundamental changes it will bring to the economy. But there are those who believe that the Fed has raised interest rates too high in an attempt to curb inflation and that a recession is inevitable. But if it starts to cut rates because of a potential recession and inflation starts to rise again, the Fed will be backed into a corner. In 2024, the Fed's decisions will be even more influenced by macro data and markets could be more volatile than usual.

The Hungarian National Bank cut its key rate by another 75 basis points to 10.00%. Inflation also continued to fall in November, to 5.5% according to KSH data, and could fall below 5% in January. In December, the National Bank had indicated that it could cut the key rate by up to 100 basis points, but it stuck to 75 basis points due to the weakening forint. Interestingly, after the lower-than-expected rate decision, the forint strengthened and traded below 385 against the euro at the end of the month.

Premium funds performed well in the first month of the year. The strategic asset class mix in the funds was unchanged from the decision taken at the beginning of the year. However, within the equity asset class, we have reduced the weighting of developed market exposure back to neutral. In emerging markets, we have reduced the long-term target level of global exposure in favor of Central Europe, bringing the weighting back to the new strategy level. As a result of the new decision, we are keeping them at neutral. We have not changed the weightings of the other asset classes.
